A Chinese garden is full of interesting things to discover. Can you find these? Good luck!

Many creatures make Lan Su their home. How many different creatures can you see on your visit?

There are many wonderful large rocks in the garden from Lake Tai in China. This one has writing on it which says Music in Stone.

Lan Su’s Lake Zither has fish, a small boat, water plants, and a water fall. What is your favorite part of the lake?

A garden such as Lan Su would have been part of where a family lived. Find the place where the family would remember loved ones and offer them their favorite things.
Can you find this tiny forest? It is called penjing. Imagine yourself very small resting under one of the trees—that is what they would do in China.

Flowers bloom throughout spring. Find a flower you like best that is blooming during your visit.

As the sun shines, look for how shadows are “painted” on the white walls.

Do you know this game? It is the Chinese chess game called Wei Chi and now is played around the world.
The Chinese invented the process for making porcelain pottery and are known worldwide for their blue and white designs. Look for this one.

It is the Year of the Dog. Can you find this dog?

Find this mosaic stone pattern made-up of geometric shapes. Do you feel the stones underneath your feet?

There are many pine trees in the garden. You can hear water flowing by this one. Pine trees symbolize living a long time.
Find this small child’s hat decorated with a lion that protects.

Look for this big leafed plant. Often, the shape of a leaf helps to tell us what type of plant it is. This is a rhododendron.

Each building has a beautiful poetic name in Chinese. Look for this sign with three Chinese characters. It reads Hall of Brocade Clouds.

Try to find mushroom shapes in the furniture. Mushrooms are also a symbol for long life in China just like the pine tree.