Chinese New Year — The Year of the Pig

Lan Su celebrates Chinese New Year beginning February 5 with a variety of events including: lion dances, cultural and school performances, talks, and four special lantern viewing evenings ... See the complete schedule on the pull-out section.
Autumn and winter are not only the most inspiring time in the garden, but also the busiest for our team of horticulturists.

Winter chill is beginning to set in, with the memory of the inspiring floral designs of the Ninth Moon Floral Design Showcase alongside hundreds of colorful chrysanthemums displayed in the garden.

As the koi begin their slumber, Portland's winter of endless rain — and perhaps a little snow — gives our plants a time to prepare for the production of new growth, flowers and seed as new root development takes place. With this preparation, Lan Su's horticulturists take the opportunity to maintain the balance of the trees and shrubs by pruning.

None are held in more esteem than the pines, Hei Song (Pinus thunbergii) Chih Song (P. densiflora) Riben Wuuzhen Song (P. parviflora). Pines are extensively used in penjing and Northwest Coast native Shore Pine (P. contorta ssp. contorta).

In Asian gardens, a method known as “needling” pines, the removal of many of its pine needles, is necessary to direct new bud growth to specific areas of the tree. During this process the crown of the tree and tips of the branches are pruned back to force the new growth to develop on the lower branches and closer to the trunk.

The process of “candling” or pinching the new growth takes place in spring. Otherwise, a garden pine meant to be kept at 10 feet tall, would quickly reach 30 or even 50 feet, and lose all of its lower branches, like a pine found in the forest.

As you walk through the garden this winter to enjoy the sweet fragrance of our plum trees (Mei Hua — Prunus mume) and Wintersweet (Lamei — Chimonanthus praecox), you may also find us carefully pruning magnolias, maples, crabapples and broadleaf evergreens, clipped to harmonize with the garden’s architecture as well as maintaining the balance with the trees canopy and root production.

Now is also the time for new plantings to make their way into the garden, such as the cutting made from our famous and beloved “Old Gui” (Osmanthus heterophyllus ‘Variegatus’) planted in the Scholar’s Courtyard and Ditanghua (Kerria japonica) adorning the edge of Lake Zither around the Rock Mountain and waterfall and a grass found in the Northwest, Scouring Rush (Equisetum hyemale).

As winter carries on and the winter camellia blossoms fade, Chinese New Year begins, the koi begin to stir, the trees and shrubs also begin to awaken. The time of rest for garden comes to a close when bustling of leaf buds on the trees signal the new cycle of life in the garden.
THE LUNAR NEW YEAR IN ASIA

Learn traditions of the Lunar New Year in Asia this January

From Tsagaan Sar (meaning “white moon”) of Mongolia, to the Songkran Festival of Thailand, to the Spring Festival of China — these traditional celebrations of the lunar new year offer a variety of cultural activities and more.

THE LUNAR NEW YEAR IN ASIA

March

Following the festivities of Chinese New Year in February, March brings Fun & Games to Lan Su.

Throughout Chinese history, gardens have been places of recreation. A Chinese family who owned a garden similar to Lan Su would enjoy many games and forms of entertainment. This March, come and learn how to play Xiangqi (Chinese Chess), Mahjong, Catching Seven Pieces, and other traditional Chinese games!

CHINESE FUN AND GAMES

THE SCHOLAR’S ARTS: POETRY, MUSIC, BRUSH PAINTING AND CALLIGRAPHY

April

Learn about the classical Chinese arts of calligraphy, painting, poetry & music in April at Lan Su with weekly demonstrations, poetry readings and live music throughout the month.

SCHOLAR ART’S EVENTS INCLUDE:

• Calligraphy demonstrations every Saturday and Sunday
• Chinese music every Sunday
• Brushpainting demonstration on ceramics every Sunday
• Create a couplet for the Poetry Arch
• A display of Scholar’s Rocks for sale from Asia America Antiques and more!

Additionally, the Peach Blossom Poetry Series will feature poetry readings from local poets every Saturday at 3 p.m. with Anatoly Molotkov, Clemens Starck, Stella Guillery, and Joni Renee.

For more information and a complete schedule, visit www.lansugarden.org/scholarsarts

YAJI – AN “ELEGANT GATHERING” OF SCHOLARS

Saturday, April 6 | 12-1 p.m. (followed by demonstrations 1-5 p.m.)

During the late Yuan and early Ming dynasty, Chinese scholars gathered in gardens to enjoy food and wine, compose poems, play quqin music, create paintings, and appreciate antiques. These “elegant gatherings” were formally named Ya Ji.

Join us on Saturday, April 6 and experience the gathering of scholars who will inspire each other with Chinese brush painting, calligraphy and poetry, quqin music and a special Chinese seal carving “zhuanke” demonstration.

For more information and a complete schedule of the Ya Ji, visit www.lansugarden.org/ya ji Lantern Viewing Evenings!

FEBRUARY 16-19, 2019

As part of Chinese New Year — the Year of the Pig — four traditional Lantern Viewing Evenings close out the festivities. The garden will glow with hanging red lanterns illuminating sweeping roof lines and the lake will reflect the light of a large illuminated 20 ft. dragon lantern sculpture and flower lanterns!

A dragon procession by Lee’s Association Dragon & Lion Dance Team, the popular Wishing Tree activity, family-friendly lantern craft activity, calligraphy and a performance by the Portland Chinese Dance Troupe are all a part of these special evenings. Vegetarian noodle boxes by Strait's Kitchen alongside wine & beer will be available for purchase. Complimentary hot cider will be provided. The Teahouse will be open each night with non-reserved seating ($10 per person minimum).

FOUR NIGHTS OF LANTERN VIEWING EVENINGS
See Lan Su come alive with beautiful lit sculptures in Lake Zither and floating displays during the Chinese New Year Celebration with traditional lantern viewing evenings Saturday, February 16 through Tuesday, February 19.
